“In his first few days as Campaigns Manager for Animal Concern, Don Staniford went undercover at The Scottish Salmon Company and filmed horrific scenes of animal suffering at the West Strome salmon farm in Loch Carron on 6th September. Animal Concern is about to ask the Scottish Green Party to use their new ministerial positions within the Scottish Government to finally force the authorities to take this issue seriously, prosecute the farm concerned, call an immediate moratorium on the expansion of salmon farming in Scottish waters and order a full review of what must surely be the cruellest industry in Scotland. On seeing what Don had captured on film John F. Robins of Animal Concern said;

“Don Staniford has been working with us for less than a fortnight and he has already exposed one of the worst cases of farm animal cruelty I have seen in my 41 years with Animal Concern. The numerous dead and dying fish he filmed have obviously been left to suffer for several days if not weeks. The salmon are literally being slowly eaten alive by parasites. Animal Concern is going to push for this farm to be prosecuted for cruelty and neglect and we want the Scottish Government to start taking this matter seriously. There can be no doubt that the agencies which should be policing salmon farms are not fit for purpose. Now that the Green Party have Ministerial positions within the Scottish Government we expect them to take decisive action immediately”.
